

Media Release – 5 December 2012

Our sincere thanks to our volunteers

Volunteers play an integral and highly important role in our schools and our wider communities on a daily basis.

“Today, International Volunteers Day, we convey our deepest appreciation and thanks to all the volunteers out there” stated Adam Walding, President of the NT Council of Government School Organisations (NT COGSO).

“Volunteers play a critical support role in our schools here in the NT; their selfless contribution to our School Councils, canteens, classrooms, fundraising and other school activities for the benefit of all our children makes a huge difference.”

It’s not just our schools that benefit, it’s the broader community; volunteers help grow our children and our country in many and varied areas.

NT COGSO joins with our National peak parent body the Australian Council of State School Organisations (ACSSO) in conveying our sincerest congratulations to all volunteers and thanks them for their contributions to our schools, communities and society in general.

Further information:
Adam Walding, President NT COGSO
8999 3255